In this we have been theoretically right, but practically we have made a great mistake. All means, political, diplomatic, and literary,

This state of things results from party obligations and a regard to party success. And they but subserve the ends of their estabishment in consulting their own interests, and the advancement of the party to which they are pledged. You cannot look to them as sentinels over interests that are repugnant to the feelings of the majority of the selfsustaining party.
In the Federal Legislature the South has have been used to concentrate the public opinion, not only of the world at large, but some voice and some votes: but over the pubof our own country, against us; and resting

How dangerous such a state of things must be to the fidelity of your representatives it is needless to say! They are but men, and it would be unwise to suppose that they are beyond the reach of temp-

We have vast interests, which we are bound, by many considerations, to defend with all the moral and political means in our power. One of the first steps to this great end is to establish a Southern Organ here, a paper through which we may commune with one another and the world at contumely and scorn through all the avennes large. We do not propose to meddle with political parties as they now exist; we wish lic opinion of the world.
